

Judge Nixes School District Bid

An order sought by the Jefferson Union High School District to prevent teachers from continuing their week-long strike was rejected Monday by Superior Court Judge William Lanam.

Lanam said he was "reluctant to bring such a far-reaching temporary restraining order at this time."

"I do not think that the declarations received show any overwhelming amount of violence," he said.

Pointing out that the district had presented evidence of picketers blocking the entrance to school facilities, Lanam did issue an order restraining them from harassing persons who wish to cross picket lines.

Lanam scheduled a hearing on the district's pleas to halt the strike for 9 a.m. Thursday at the Hall of Justice in Redwood City. In the meantime, lawyers representing the striking teachers and the district will submit additional arguments to him.

The teachers' counsel, Robert Bezemek, argued that the striking teachers are protected by the First Amendment and said the court has no right to interfere in efforts by teachers to overturn what he termed unfair labor practices of the district.

The judge appeared most interested in Bezemek's contention that the district had not exhausted all other intermediate remedies before seeking injunctive relief from the court. Bezemek said the district should have brought the matter before the state Public Employees Relations Board, an arbitration board created by the Rodda Act, which gives teachers the right to collective bargaining.

Lanam asked Bezemek to back up his arguments with evidence that the district had not exhausted all other alternatives, short of requesting a restraining order from the court.

Representing the district, Deputy District Attorney George Camerlingo cited other cases in which the courts have intervened against striking teachers.

Camerlingo said, "Mr. Bezemek has created a new species of strike — an unfair labor practices strike. A strike is a strike is a strike."

Strike Still Rages

Progress towards settlement of the 12-day-old garbage strike in San Bruno was made by the City Council Monday night when it authorized City Attorney Joseph Galligan to meet with representatives of the San Bruno Garbage Co.

But first, the council said, the garbage company will have to meet with striking teamsters to attempt to reach a tentative agreement. Then that agreement will have to be brought to Galligan, who was assigned the task of determining if that tentative pact is reasonable.

On Sept. 1, members of Teamster's Union Local 350 struck the garbage company in a dispute concerning wages. About 20 San Bruno garbage truck drivers and helpers are members of that teamster's local, and no collections in the city have been made since that time.

The council also scheduled another meeting this week — for Wednesday night at 8 — in hopes that Galligan will have some news to report back.

The vote to authorize Galligan to represent the city was 3-2, with Mayor Dick Griffith and Councilman Doug Dawkins opposing it.

Griffith said he would not support the motion made by Councilman Tom Ricci because it would put the city in a position of having to pass on any results of garbage company and union negotiations to San Bruno customers.

Attorney George Corey, representing the garbage company, said just after midnight today that he would begin meetings with union representatives immediately.

In two other related matters, the council:

- Authorized Galligan to explore the legal possibilities of seeking an injunction against the teamsters in hopes that service would be reinstated.

Galligan, however, said he did not believe the courts would grant such an injunction.

- Decided to withhold any further payments to the garbage company for services rendered or not rendered after Sept. 1 until the strike is settled.

The monthly cost of garbage is $1,000.

Reserve firemen learn how to fight fires for the City of Brisbane from Acting Captain Mike Semeria.

Fire Fighting Force to Be Reduced

Brisbane Braces for Drastic Cuts

"I guess we're the only fire department in the state that's getting nailed with a drastic cut," said Brisbane Fire Chief Clarence "Dutch" Moritz.

His force of 14 firefighters is scheduled to be trimmed to four by the end of October, with layoffs of the first six due to take place this Friday.

A group backing the firefighters is seeking a temporary restraining order in court to prevent the layoffs.

The Brisbane City Council voted to reduce its fire department after determining that Proposition 13 might lead the city to bankruptcy unless severe cuts are made.

City Manager Brad Kerwin said he's beginning to feel like a broken record with his message that the city simply does not have enough money to keep the current number of firemen.

Kerwin, other city officials and police officers have been trained to help fight fires.

The council's decision prompted a group of citizens, headed by volunteer firefighter James Baker, to band together as the Concerned Citizens Advisory Committee in opposition to the layoffs.

CCAC is seeking the recall of all five council members. The organization won two victories in court last week. A judge ruled that they will not have to publish recall documents in both Spanish and English, as Brisbane City Attorney George Silvestri had advised. An initiative petition that they circulated, seeking maintenance of the fire department at current levels, will be on the November ballot despite the objections of the City Council.

All this legal maneuvering is bitter solace for the firemen who may be fired in the next few days. One fireman who stands to lose his job Friday, Tom Cerri, explained, "You're really over the hill at age 30. Who wants a 38-year-old fireman? None of the fire departments are hiring now."

Cerri isn't optimistic about the CCAC's ability to forestall the layoffs. He's downright pessimistic about the city's plan to fight fires with city employees, police and a handful of reserve officers who are being trained.

"It all looks great on paper, but in a real fire — unless you've been through it several times — you're scared to death."

Frank Doolin, a volunteer firefighter for the past 14 years, said he and the other two volunteers have informed the city that they do not intend to fight fires any longer. "I've been hurt three times in 14 years. The risk factor is much greater when you're working with amateurs," he explained.

The city's plan after the layoffs calls for having one regular fireman on duty, one reserve fireman working and two police officers standing ready at any one time. They will summon additional help for a major alarm.

Chief Moritz expressed concern about the department's ability to respond with a second unit. He explained that a fire can burn out of control 10 to 15 minutes after it first breaks out.

The firemen pointed out that police may be too busy fighting fires to respond to other emergencies. "I want to be a bank robber in this town," Doolin said.

Cerri remarked that the low wages paid to reserve firemen will prevent the city from ever keeping well trained reserve ranks for long. Four reserve firefighters were being trained one day last week. They will earn $5 per hour for working a maximum of 20 hours per week.

Cerri joked, "You ought to open up a firefighting school, chief."

To critics of the plan, City Manager Kerwin points out that a number of cities, including Sunnyvale, have successfully operated with consolidated safety services for years.

He denounces the protests of CCAC as "political scare tactics" and notes that national firemen union officials have backed CCAC's efforts because the success of Brisbane's experiment could prompt other cities to consolidate their police and fire departments.

Kerwin charges that CCAC has yet to prove where it will draw the $200,000 necessary to maintain fire service at the present level. Until someone finds that sum, he said, the city has no alternative but to reduce its expenses drastically.

Doolin maintains, "Somebody's going to have to get hurt or killed before this city wakes up." Brisbane hasn't had a death due to a household fire in 10 years.

Moritz said he is trying to stay out of the heavy politics surrounding the cutbacks. "I'll just have to do the best with what we have," he remarked.

Council Firm: Rehab Program Under Manager

Refusing to buckle under criticism by a citizens' group, the Daly City Council voted 4-0 Monday night to tuck the city's housing rehabilitation program under the wing of the city manager.

The action came after a 40-minute presentation by the Original Daly City Protective Association, which charged that city officials are responsible for delaying the low-cost loan program and for obstructing citizen involvement in it.

Specifically, the council decided to operate the rehabilitation program as a division of the city's Community Development Department, under the direction and control of City Manager David Rowe.

Previously, the program was operated under the guidance of a policy advisory committee composed of city officials.

The council also asked a citizens' advisory committee to review the entire program, as well as to study a request by Rehabilitation Loan Officer M. Barbara Hill for two additional staffers.

With the exception of the controversial multi-purpose center, the council approved all of Rowe's recommendations for fourth-year funding under the Housing and Community Development Act.

The funds will be spent on a house painting program, the Anti-Crime League, Hillside, Bayshore and Lincoln parks, John Daly Tot Lot, and program administration, in addition to housing rehabilitation.

The council delayed action on the multi-purpose center pending further information on litigation proceedings against one reluctant property owner who owns land where the center is proposed. It would house some city offices and recreational facilities.

The council also decided to eliminate spending $26,000 in city funds on the HCDA projects, paying that sum out of third-year carry-over funds and program income.

The city has been allocated $250,000 in fourth-year HCDA funds.

Before ODCPA gave its presentation, Mayor William Schumacher repeatedly asked citizens to focus on rehabilitation issues rather than personalities.

Conrad Pavellas, founder of ODCPA apologized to Ms. Hill for remarks he previously made about her handling of rehabilitation loans. But he traced delays in the program to November 1977, when Ms. Hill took charge of rehabilitation for the city.

Another ODCPA member, Ernest Pezzola, spoke of citizens who have been waiting for rehabilitation loans since 1976. Blaming the city for delays, Pezzola said he was astounded that the rehabilitation committee had rebuked ODCPA.

Edward Eastman, chairman of the citizens' rehabilitation advisory committee, said the group had given Ms. Hill a vote of confidence.

Tom Adams of the Legal Aid Society, criticized the city's financial statements for the rehabilitation program, saying they were too complicated for the average citizen to understand.

Fred DeJarlais, HCDA fund coordinator for Daly City, admitted that the city is not pleased with the amount of HCDA funds spent on administration of the rehabilitation program over the past three years, but he pointed out that similar programs around the country also have experienced heavy administrative start-up costs.

Other business:

RETIREMENT HOME — The council voted 3-1, with Councilman Anthony Giammona casting the only "no" vote, to approve a negative declaration and to grant a variance requested for retirement facilities on the south side of Southgate Avenue at Sullivan Avenue.

YOUTH EMPLOYMENT — The council was unanimous in approving up to $1,600 in General Fund revenues to continue operation of a youth employment program through Oct. 1.

Castelan to Head DCCCS

New officers were elected last week by the Daly City Community for Children's Services, which specializes in day care services.

Julius Castelan of Bay Area Regional Planning, Inc. was elected president. Three parents whose children have been involved in the day care programs were selected for the other offices: Janice Skipper was named vice president, Roger Cook was elected treasurer and Cynthia de Avilar was chosen secretary.

The four previous officers of the organization were ousted by the board in August.

The new officers have two immediate goals: rewriting the organization's by-laws and finding a building to house one of its day care programs.

Garbage Company Seeks Rate Hike

Daly City garbage rates will go up for the second time this year if the Daly City Scavenger Co. has its way.

The company released financial statements Monday in an attempt to justify a proposed 5 percent hike on all rates.

City Manager David Rowe said that increase would translate into an increase of 22 1/2 cents per month for the average household.

The current monthly rate is $4.10 for the first garbage can, with an extra $2.10 per month charged for the second can. Homeowners living in nearby areas outside of Daly City, such as Broadmoor, pay $5.25 per month for the first can and $2.75 per month for the second can.

The current rates were adopted by the City Council in February after the scavenger company argued that an increase was necessary to offset the cost of hauling the city's garbage to the San Francisco transfer station for disposal.

The public may comment on the proposed rate at a public hearing at 7 p.m. on Oct. 2 in the council chambers at City Hall.

Pacifica Still Needs Crossing Guard Funds

Several school crossing guards may be hired in Pacifica at the most dangerous intersections if another $7,000 can be found in the Laguna Salada School District budget.

The Pacifica City Council voted Monday to set aside $7,000 to hire crossing guards if the school district would match that contribution and be responsible for hiring and paying the guards.

Gul Ramchandani, director of finance in Pacifica, told the council that before the passage of Proposition 13 the city had paid for crossing guards out of a special traffic safety fund.

In 1977-78, he said, the city allocated $21,956.

However, the City Council decided this summer during budget hearings that it could no longer afford the guards and that perhaps the school district should look into paying those salaries.

Schools Superintendent James Brien said Tuesday that the district does not have the money in its budget for the guards, and that if $7,000 is allocated it will have to come out of reserves.

"We don't have a lot of spare money sitting around," he said.

Brien added that the proposal will be brought to the school board on Sept. 21 for its consideration.

Several parents addressed the City Council on Monday, blaming it for not hiring the guards again and saying the city had the responsibility for their children's safety.

Council members were angry that they were being blamed for not hiring the guards, saying the parents were misplacing the responsibility on them when the school district should pay for the guards.

"The school district is in a better position than the city of Pacifica," Mayor Nick Gust said. "We're in the red right now, not them...the dollars aren't there."

Councilman Mark Savage said he also could not see why the parents assumed it was the city's responsibility to continue to pay for crossing guards.

Actually, he said, it is the parents' responsibility to teach their children how to cross busy streets safely.

Teacher Ingrid Lacy warned that an immediate danger existed and that guards must be available as soon as possible.

"Somebody better do something starting tomorrow," she said.

Parents Charlotte and Ron Amestan said their son goes to Ortega School and that Terra Nova Boulevard is an extremely dangerous street for him to cross alone.

Last year, Mrs. Amestan said, she helped youngsters cross the street and she pulled "hundreds" of them to safety in front of Ortega School.

She presented the council with a petition signed by 300 parents asking that money for crossing guards be put back in the budget.

Her husband called Terra Nova a "fantastic drag strip," adding that "I sure hope it's not my son or any of your children" who is run over.

Another parent, Pat Burns, said, "something's going to happen soon."

She blamed reckless teen-agers on their way to Terra Nova High School for part of the problem, saying that when she walks her child to school "half the time we're getting run down the same time as our kids."

Police Chief Tony Guardino said there are three critical areas that need crossing guards — on Terra Nova Boulevard, on Linda Mar Boulevard in front of Sanchez School and at the intersection of Manor Drive and Inverness Avenue.

"None of us wants to see anyone run down in a crosswalk anywhere," he said, adding that he is greatly concerned about children's safety and has met with the school district superintendent recently to discuss the problem.

'Liberal Policy' On Tax Appeals

Every consideration possible should be given to accepting late property tax appeals because of this year's shortened period for filing appeals, the county Board of Supervisors agreed Tuesday.

Lacking the authority to extend the Oct. 2 filing deadline, the board voted to ask the county's assessment appeals board to be as "liberal as possible" in taking late applications.

At the same time, the supervisors reminded property owners they need not wait until they receive their reassessment notices this week to contest the values assigned to their property.

Taxpayers may call the assessor's office for their post-Jarvis reassessments and file applications immediately, if they so desire.

The appeals board has the authority to alter a property assessment after considering testimony from the property owner and representatives of the assessor's office. Taxes are calculated based on the assessed value of property.

District Attorney Keith Sorenson cautioned the board that the current deadline is fairly strict, and advised that valid reasons for late appeals must be considered by the appeals board before the appeals can be accepted.

During the past week, Supervisor William Royer has expressed concern that property owners would not have enough time to determine if their assessments conform to Prop. 13 requirements and, if not, whether an appeal should be filed.

Reassessment notices are due to be delivered Sept. 15, about two weeks prior to the filing deadline.

The supervisor had noted that some property owners may be out of town during the two-week period and thus would not be advised of their reassessments until after the deadline.

Royer recommended today that the board unilaterally authorize an extension of the deadline to Oct. 16. But he received no support from his colleagues, after Sorenson advised that extension authority rests solely with the state Legislature.

San Mateo will be the last of the four major Bay Area counties to mail reassessment notices. San Francisco mailed notices July 25-28; Alameda, Aug. 15; Santa Clara, Aug. 21; and Contra Costa, Sept. 5.

The delay in this year's mailing is a direct result of an unsuccessful attempt by the supervisors to get the Legislature to extend the filing deadline so reassessment notices could be combined with tax bills to be sent in October.

TWO FOOTBALL GAMES

Westmoor and Jefferson High Schools in Daly City are the only schools in the Jefferson Union High School District that will hold football games this Friday.

David Shepherd, public information officer for the district, explained that three schools have cancelled Friday games because adequate practices were not held. He said the game scheduled Friday at Serramonte High School in Daly City is "still in question."

The cancellations stem from a week-long strike by teachers in the district. Most football coaches have been honoring the picket lines.

Jeff Strike

Arguing that strikes by public employees are illegal, Camerlengo noted that the district is losing $5,000 a day and that 7,000 students are suffering "irreparable harm" due to the strike.

A brief submitted by Camerlengo included declarations by three district employees, John Angle, Emma Bogatin and Kathleen Page, stating that pickets had obstructed their entrance to school facilities.

Superintendent Floyd

Gonella explained after the hearing that the cost of $5,000 a day includes the expense of posting security guards on campuses and paying lots of overtime to substitute teachers hired to fill in for striking teachers. The substitutes are being paid $75 per day, twice the usual rate for substitutes.

Gonella said the district is not prepared to offer more than a 4 percent wage increase for teachers, retroactive to Feb. 1. The teachers, who want an 8 percent pay hike for all of 1977-78, rejected that offer.

AFSCME Seeks Sanction of Strike

Teachers in the Jefferson Union High School District may have company soon as they walk picket lines.

Members of Local 377 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees filed Monday night for strike sanction from the San Mateo County Central Labor Council so that they also may strike against the district, which has six high schools in Daly City and Pacifica.

AFSCME members include bus drivers, maintenance workers and cafeteria workers. Many have been honoring the picket lines already, but the union cannot officially strike without the Central Labor Council's sanction. A hearing on the union's request is scheduled at the Labor Council office in San Mateo Sept. 18 at 7 p.m.

The union voted in favor of striking last Friday.

No incidents on the picket lines were reported as students entered school Tuesday morning for the first day of classes following a three-day holiday. Members of Local 1481 of the American Federation of Teachers counted 70 teachers who crossed the picket lines, meaning that 80 percent of the district's teachers apparently honored the strike.

Last Friday, 86 percent of the district's teachers failed to report to work.

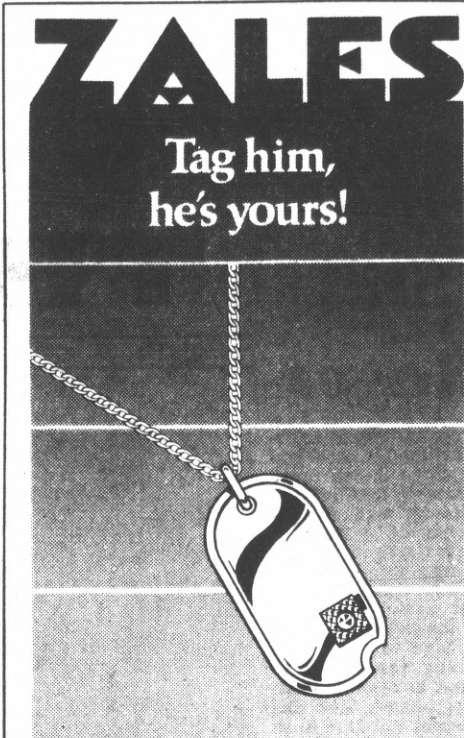

AFT reported student attendance figures this morning as follows: half of Oceana's 1,215 students showed up; 80 of Thornton's 225 students arrived; 1,300 of Westmoor's 1,600 students appeared; 400 of Jefferson's 1,200 students showed up; 400 of Serramonte's 1,200 students attended; and 1,000 of Oceana's 1,500 students appeared.

The district reported the lowest student attendance of the four days the teachers have been on strike was Friday, when 3,885 of the district's 6,888 students came to classes — a 56 percent showing.

The teachers voted to strike last Tuesday for retroactive wages for 1977-78.

The district says there are complications with releasing money to pay past wages.

By JANET PARKER
"I should write a story about that."
How many times have you said that?
It's a humorous incident, retold countless times, that seems to grow better with age. Or, it's a moving family experience oozing with sentimentality. Maybe it's just an everyday sort of occurrence that's bound to find a sympathetic audience.

"I bet 'Reader's Digest' would be interested in something like that," the would-be author ponders.
Enter Thomas Fitzpatrick III of San Mateo, who teaches English at Serramonte High School in Daly City. He did what most people only talk about, turning an incident that occurred five years ago into a captivating reminiscence that won itself a spot in the steadfast periodical.

It's a plum that many a young writer eager to achieve publication would envy. It'll be seen by 30 million readers in 13 different languages.

"My mother will subtly leave it around in the house so you have to trip over three copies to take a seat," Fitzpatrick said.

The engaging tale, called "The Grass Catcher," focuses on Thomas Fitzpatrick Jr., the author's father, his compelling imagination and his secret.

Fitzpatrick weaves a portrayal of a man who can fascinate the youngsters with stories of Vikings, explorers and big-game hunters. It's about a man who can transform piles of grass clippings into a blazing battlefield.

But, most of all, it's a nice story of a father-and-son relationship and a neglected taste for high adventure.

That word "nice," Fitzpatrick said, is the key. "A couple of people who read it called it a 'nice' story," the author related. "And that's the kind of thing 'Reader's Digest' seems to go for. It seems to have a higher degree of sentimentality in its stories."

The reminiscence, he said, is essentially a factual one. He may have rearranged events a bit, he said, to mold the story together.

Fitzpatrick was notified in April that his story would be used this month. When he wrote it last summer, he said, he didn't even have a specific market in mind, only an idea. He wrote and rewrote the 1,200-word article over the period of a week and when he was through, he knew he had a good one.

"I wrote it so long ago, it's not even exciting any more," Fitzpatrick said of finally seeing his article in print in such a widely read publication.

"When they accept it and send you a check, that's exciting."

The writer and teacher said he carries around "a crummy little notebook" in which he jots down story ideas "because I have no memory at all."

The idea for a story comes fairly easily to him. Actually starting the story is the problem.

"I think a lot of people would have a problem if they wrote something, sent it away and got it rejected. It's a crushing experience," he said.

Fitzpatrick adds a novel touch to his composition. Due to a back injury, he stands up at an antique, oak lectern and types his stories. He claims he can type just as long as anyone who has the benefit of a chair.

His father, who is the star of the yarn, first read the story when his son wrote it a year ago. He thought it was good then and he thinks it's even better now that it's in print.

Thomas Fitzpatrick Jr. of San Francisco admits his son took on a bit of "poetic license. I'm not as old as he says."

The basis of the story —

a father encouraging the imagination of his children — is true, although the events are a bit restructured.

"We'd go on a little walk, but it wouldn't be just a walk," he explained.

"We actually were something — marauders, raiders, scouts." The rabbits in the woods on vacation became buffalo and the rock outcroppings became the Grand Canyon.

WINNERS

Kenny Yuson Off to Playoff

The Daly City Recreation Department recently held first-round Mr. Peanut Target Tennis competitions at Westlake Park tennis courts and the Margate Tennis Complex. The competition, open to boys and girls 16 years and under, is a skill building experience. The player accumulates points by hitting baseline corner targets with ground strokes, volleys, and over-heads. Service court targets are also used for the serve. Out of five returns per stroke, total maximum points possible is 625, plus 125 for serves. One winner from each age group was chosen based on highest number of points. First-round finalists were Cliff Tsuji (12 years and under), Kenny Yuson (14 and under), and Mike Bauer (16 and under). They joined other local Bay Area winners to compete for the district title. Mike Bauer placed third in the 16 and under division with a score of 220. Cliff Tsuji placed second in the 12 and under division with a score of 220. The 14 and under district title was won by Kenny Yuson with a score of 285. He and one parent will fly to Los Angeles for the regional playoff. Kenny will be competing with winners from Seattle, San Diego, and Los Angeles.

Handling of Injured Deer in Dispute

A Pacifica woman says the Peninsula Humane Society was not very humane when it killed an injured deer last week. Pat Campanna said she is angry that a deer found near her home on Lincoln Place in Pacifica had to be shot three times by a humane society officer. She charges that if the officer had been competent, only one shot would have been necessary to kill the young deer. Jennifer Hill, public information officer for the Peninsula Humane Society, said there was nothing unusual about the procedure followed and that it usually takes two shots to kill large animals. Last Wednesday afternoon two boys found a young deer that apparently had been hit by a car. The deer was brought to a resident's backyard. Neighbors covered the deer with a blanket and called the humane society. The deer was "very alert," Mrs. Campanna said "and knew what was happening." After examining the deer, the unidentified officer said it would have to be euthanized. When neighbors were told the animal would be shot, several of them called their own veterinarians to see if one of them could come and give it an injection to put it to sleep, instead of shooting it. When no veterinarian was available, Mrs. Campanna said, the residents were told to leave the area and that the deer would be shot. She said that if they needed someone to blindly shoot the animal, then the police department should have been called. But, she said, the neighbors expected that someone with experience would have been used by the humane society — someone who would not have to shoot the deer three times to kill it. If the boys had left the deer where they found it, "the animal would have had a better death," Mrs. Campanna said. Miss Hill of the humane society said the deer had two broken legs and therefore had to be killed on the spot. An autopsy revealed that the second shot killed the deer, she said, adding that the third shot was fired when the officer saw the deer kick as a result of a muscle spasm. The deer was shot because humane society officers are not allowed to carry a hypodermic needle or drugs to euthanize animals, according to Miss Hill. There is no question, she said, that the case was handled properly. Miss Hill said she understands how upset the neighbors must have been when the deer had to be shot. "Animals are such an emotional issue," she said. "People do tend to get very upset."

Trio Given Recognition

Three citizens, Louis Cruz, Robert and Chris Zimiga, all have received certificates of appreciation from the Daly City Police Department for their help during a strongarm robbery on July 23. According to Assistant Chief Richard Sims, the trio provided the police with descriptions of suspects and also helped search the area. Police arrested the suspects. "This is what they do when a wild animal is hurt?" asked an outraged Mrs. Campanna. "It just seems there is a better way."

San Bruno Situation Clearing Up

A crisis situation stemming from reported unruly behavior at San Bruno City Park appears to have subsided, city officials said this week. "I'm optimistic that we are controlling the problem," said Police Chief Frank Hedley. "I haven't perceived a huge problem there," added City Manager Gerald Minford. And, said Park and Recreation Director Paul Crum, "We've had no unusual problems." Problems at the 33-acre park were brought to the attention of the City Council late last month by David Nigel, a member of the city Park and Recreation Commission. Nigel said problems at the park stem from excessive drinking by youths, littering, smoking marijuana, urinating in public, abusive language, illegal parking, reckless driving and vandalism. The City Council on Aug. 28 responded by deciding to ban all alcoholic beverages from the park. However, an effort to make such an ordinance effective immediately was thwarted by Mayor Dick Griffith, who said he believed the police department could handle the immediate situation. As it stands now, the ordinance will become effective Oct. 11. Hedley said that in the past week more than a dozen persons, most of them young, have been arrested at the park, primarily on charges of a minor possessing alcohol and being drunk in public. "Our responsibility," Hedley said, "is to go out and control the situation. The number of violators that we have arrested are violating laws already in existence." Hedley said complaints to his department during the past week have been minimal. "In fact, several people in the area have stopped by to pat us on the back for doing a good job. We have had some minor complaints, but nothing of any magnitude." The chief added that he has increased the amount of time officers spend in the park in efforts to curb any problems. City Manager Minford, who lives near the park, said the large number of arrests at the park seemed to have eased the situation, although he did point out that the park was jammed on Labor Day. Crum was more specific. "We haven't had any problems at all. The very presence of black and whites (police vehicles) patrolling the park has been a deterrent to the problem. Everything Chief Hedley said would work to control the problem has worked," he said. Crum acknowledged the park was crowded over the weekend, and that with the garbage strike in San Bruno perhaps more litter than usual was left there. "However, we have no unusual problems and have had no complaints in the past week," he added.

Widespread Use of Expensive 'CT Scanner' Questioned Revolution in the Radiology Lab

By JANET PARKER

It opens the body as skillfully as a surgeon's knife and is less painful than swallowing an aspirin.

But the newest trend in medical diagnostic work also is very expensive; for that reason, many hospital observers and consumer advocates are questioning its proliferation.

That costly device — priced from $500,000 to $700,000 — is a complicated, computerized X-ray machine that's revolutionizing the radiology lab.

Within a year, each of five San Mateo County hospitals will have purchased and installed its own "computerized tomography" device or, for short, "CT scanner."

Above and beyond the original price, the machine isn't cheap to operate. One study, according to the West Bay Health Systems Agency, puts the annual average operating cost at about $285,000.

A federal study released on Aug. 13 charged that computerized X-ray equipment is going into widespread use without sound medical evidence that its benefits justify its costs.

"We would like to not see too many of those machines because each one increases the cost of medical care in general," Dr. Dario deLeon, the agency's medical director, said.

There's little debate that the CT scanner, a complex device that requires three or four rooms all its own to function, lets physicians see things they could never see before.

"They are exquisite in what they can accomplish in terms of diagnosis," said Dr. Ralph Schaffarzick of Burlingame.

The scanner takes X-ray images of 1-centimeter-wide cross sections of the body. Those pictures are shown in three-dimensional slices on a computer display terminal.

Schaffarzick also is the senior vice president and medical director of Blue Shield of California. And that massive health insurance provider has long been questioning the use of the expensive machine.

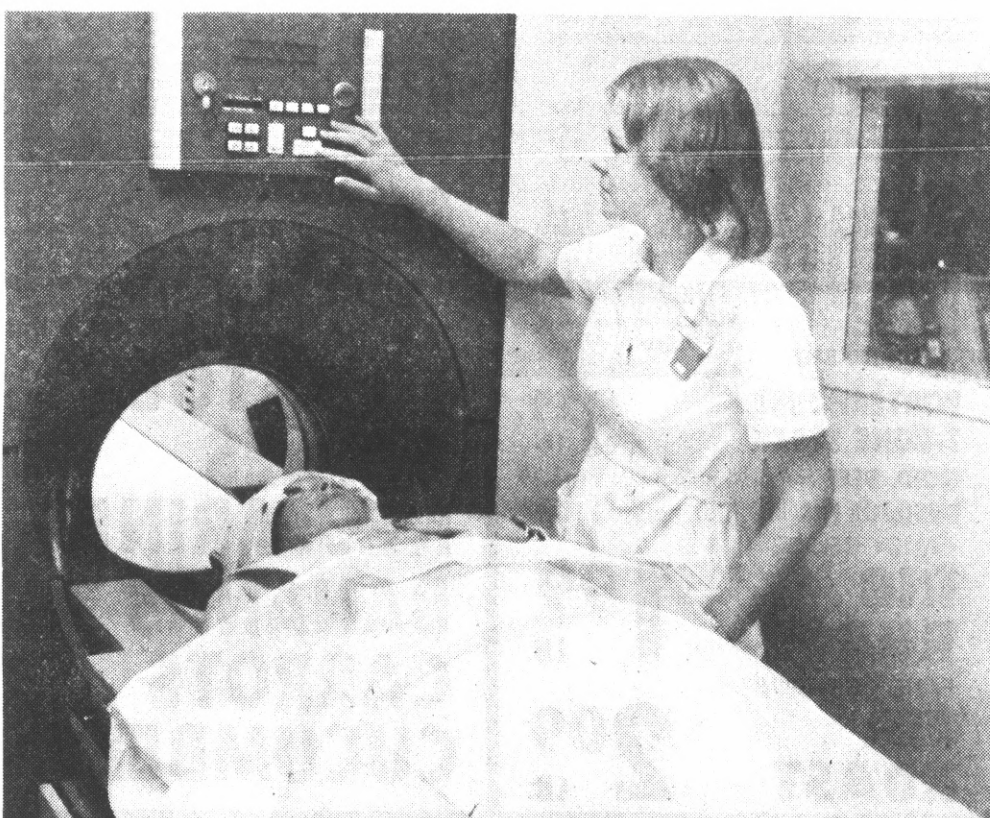

"It's something that, on one hand, represents a tremendous breakthrough, but, on the other hand, it's terribly expensive, not only in its initial cost but its operational expense."

Blue Shield, he said, contends that the motivation by hospitals is too often in "keeping up with the Joneses." The hospital fears, he said, that if it doesn't have the machine, doctors will take their patients elsewhere, resulting in empty hospital beds.

In fact, the insurance agency's official policy adopted last year forces claims for scans to undergo a stringent evaluation. For example, Blue Shield denied the diagnostic value of neck, heart and extremity scans and has refused to pay for those. It recommends review of claims for scans of many body parts, including the spinal cord, lungs and the aorta.

Blue Shield officials object to using the highly sophisticated X-ray simply to confirm something already known or "to get a better picture."

Local hospitals that have installed or are planning to install the scanners react unfavorably to Blue Shield's position, calling it self-serving for the profit-minded insurance agency.

"Everything we believed it would do, it does," said Charles H. Mason Jr., administrator of Peninsula Hospital, the first facility in San Mateo County to install and operate the machine.

The total cost, including construction of the facility, was about $700,000 in 1977.

"I don't think Blue Shield has any valid justification for its position other than a financial one," Mason said. Blue Shield, he said, has provided no solid evidence that the scanner is not properly used or that its utilization costs are not justified.

"I am not aware of any patient who has refused the procedure because of what his insurance company does," he said. "What happens is that the patient ends up paying for it out of his own pocket."

And that's not cheap. For example, according to Sequoia Hospital technologist Dave Dennis, a conventional X-ray of the head costs about $50. A CT scan costs about $250.

However, he contends that the long-range cost of using the more modern approach may be less. The scanner, he said, does things in one painless session that have heretofore been uncomfortable, time-consuming and expensive.

For example, the conventional approach to examining the ventricles of the brain has been to inject air into the spine, perform a spinal tap, and pump that air into the ventricles by turning the patient in an uncomfortable somersault position.

"It was expensive and extremely painful," Dennis said. "You went home with a headache you wouldn't forget for a long time."

The scanner, for the first time, can take a picture of those ventricles, eliminating the previously dreaded process.

Sequoia's elaborate CT scanner facility, which just became operational this month, cost $550,000. A similar arrangement at Mary's Help Hospital cost $754,300, according to a Health Systems Agency report.

Other systems, each costing about $600,000, will soon be operating at Kaiser Hospital in Redwood City (serving all of Northern California) and in the Mills Memorial Hospital wing in San Mateo.

A land rush for the CT scanner was prompted by Assembly Bill 4001 in 1976, one radiologist noted.

That legislation set up, for the first time, an elaborate certificate-of-need process covering many types of hospital equipment, including the scanner. But it also allowed a three-month exemption period in which hospitals could acquire the device if they could prove they had entered an irrevocable contract. Four of the hospitals here received so-called "certificates of exemption."

However, that process, according to Schaffarzick, does not cover the private physician, and there's nothing to stop a group of physicians from ordering a CT scanner for themselves.

Schaffarzick said he has a strong feeling that physicians, as well as hospitals, should be covered by the AB 4001 process.

According to deLeon, of the health agency, there are just too many unknowns in utilization of the CT scanner. The WBHSA has drawn up a policy recommending that each machine be used at least 2,500 times a year in order to justify its existence in the community.

"But we don't know how many scans each unit is performing at the present time," deLeon said. Most hospitals cited difficulties in determining the exact number of expected uses, but Mason said Peninsula is estimating 1,550 procedures a year.

In fact, a WBHSA report on the scanner in May said the number of scanners in operation in the area at that time — a total of 13 — was already "far beyond" the level recommended by the state. The state recommends one scanner for every 300,000 persons. Five scanners are on the way for San Mateo County's population of about 590,000.

THE HEART OF THE SYSTEM

Computerized equipment — like this print-out machine — is what the CT scanner thrives on.

The agency is also concerned, deLeon said, that the abundance of machines compels hospitals to encourage overuse to justify their costs.

The problem in the past, according to Sequoia radiologist Dr. Roy Deffabach, was that severely ill patients were sometimes placed in an ambulance and driven miles away to another hospital for a scan. It was sometimes dangerous and often inconvenient for both patient and physician.

And, Mason noted, it now costs about $150 for a round-trip by ambulance from Mills to Peninsula and back. That figure alone, he said, is close to a cost justification for having a machine at each hospital site.

The proliferation of CT scanners, he added, will obviously affect the volume of use of the Peninsula X-ray device. Despite that, he said, the hospital is not objecting to more scanners in the area and an expected cut in its own radiology income.

Defenders of the CT scanner argue that its initial cost is actually declining to the point where it costs little more than conventional X-ray equipment. Also, scanning time has dropped from as much as five minutes to five seconds for some procedures.

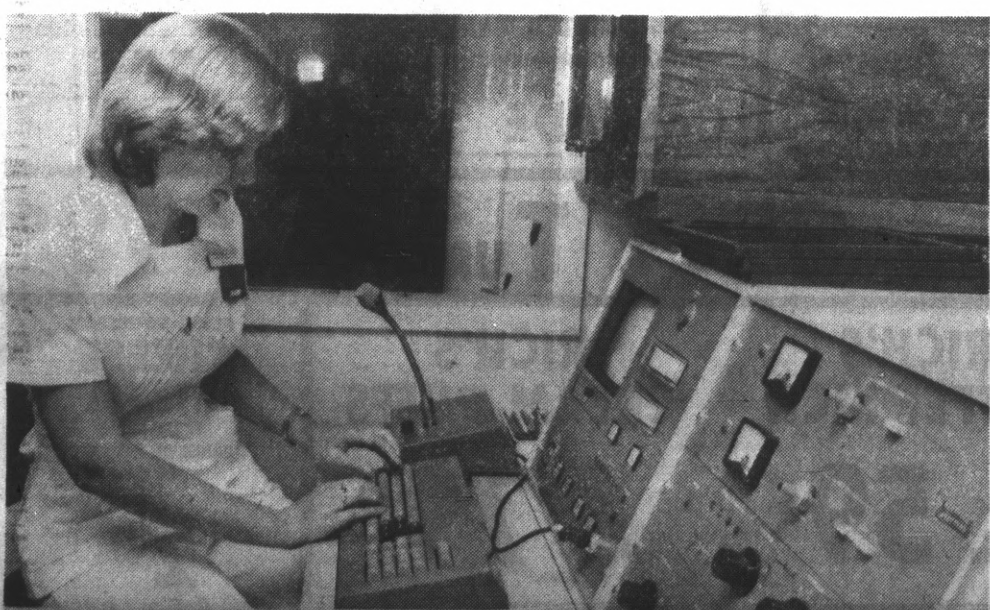

"I have feelings of ambivalence about it," Richard Daniels, Sequoia administrator, said. "Obviously, they are terribly expensive. But any hospital of fair size with an active cancer care program, a sizable case load and a neurological department ought to have them."

"We have an obligation to this community to provide the highest level of care available," Mason added.

PREPARING

The Westlake Catholic Women of Our Lady of Mercy has set Sept. 27 as the date for the Ladies Luncheon League. Helping chairwoman Carolyn Machi, middle, are Pat Rubino, reservations (left) and Eileen Barsi, decorations (right). The afternoon will begin at noon. In the parish hall with a three-course lunch, plus door prizes, coupons, raffles and games. Tickets are $3.50 and may be obtained by contacting Carolyn Machi (755-2396) before Sept. 25.

Docent Training In 'Very Special County'

By ARVILLE FINACOM

"This is a very special county . . . so much is hidden until you start studying it," says entomologist Ray Peterson.

Finding San Mateo County's hidden natural wonders, relating them to everyday life and determining how best to share them with others are goals for the "Environmental Interpretation" docent training course Peterson is teaching currently through Skyline College for the Coyote Point Museum Association.

IT WAS just a year ago that those in the Museum's first docent training class — unimaginatively titled "Practical Biology" — met Peterson and each other. Setting was the Captain's House at Coyote Point, an old frame building, last legacy of the Merchant Marine Academy that a generation ago topped the eucalyptus-clad knoll.

In Captain's House, the Museum Association shares headquarters with the San Mateo County Parks and Recreation Department, Coyote Point Division, a fitting arrangement in that county funds allocated from the park department will build the new facility and funds from the association will construct and maintain its permanent cross-country exhibit.

Those who met that day were residents of a dozen different cities and came from varied backgrounds. Several had training and experience as classroom teachers; one was a nurse. Others had worked in business and commercial fields; some were already museum and field docents.

ALTHOUGH A number had training in one or several sciences, none had the academic or experiential background necessary in all the physical and life sciences to interpret in detail "ecology" which really is, as Peterson says, a catchword meaning "the study of everything."

Common ground among us was an interest in environmental matters and a desire to communicate that interest to others. Before the year was over we would grasp with greater understanding the inter-relationships among Earth's essential elements — air, sun and water. Before the year was out we would come to see how plants and animals, ourselves chief among them, must rely wholly upon these elements for life.

But that was toward the end and much went between. At the beginning we considered, "Why be a docent?" Three quotes seem to sum up the attitude of all: "I want to generate excitement and involvement of the general public in environmental matters"; "I like to be involved in something that is evolving and continually changing"; "Environmental education is a must in order to provide concerned citizens for the future."

THE SCHOOL year began and some, who had been away from formal education for a number of years, found they had returned to travel a familiar route — texts, tests and tedium. Happily, the texts were interesting, the test questions open-ended and the tedium relieved by the unaffected, often unconscious good humor of Peterson.

Field trips added depth to dialogue and provided opportunity for more individual understanding. Burdened with binoculars and hand lenses, microscopes and cameras, trowels, trays, shovels, insect nets and sample bottles, docents-in-training observed, collected, examined and recorded findings at sites as close as the beach and salt marsh at Coyote Point itself and as far afield as Gazos Creek, south along the ocean coast below Pigeon Point. They scaled the heights of Jasper Ridge, clambered down crumbling rock outcroppings on San Bruno

Perspective

Mountain, dug the dunes at Linda Mar and sifted dirt near Searsville Lake.

With senses sharpened by such first-hand learning, they analyzed indoors the "why" and "how" of "environmental impact" studies, took a close look at the Association of Bay Area Governments "208" environmental management plan, considered the effects on the Bay of the proposed peripheral canal, and listened to current business, industry and governmental sides of environmental questions as expressed by people in those fields.

AT THE end of the training year most shared the feeling that we had learned far more than the six units of earned college credit in biology ever will show. Not only had the year been interesting, "It opened up a whole new world," said one; "my world expanded," said another. Beyond that it was unsettling. Perhaps it's a truism, but once one attains even a small degree of genuine awareness, compulsion occurs. It isn't sufficient to be a believer; one must spread the word.

Members of the Coyote Point Museum Association agree that the docent program is essential to the success of the new museum because the key to compulsive environmental awareness lies in one-to-another communication. Certainly, the museum could open its doors, let the public inside to roam at will, view the exhibits, consider the displays, and fulfill a part of its purpose. But an essential part would be left undone without the friendly voices, good-humored smiles and cheerful on-the-spot answers a fully-staffed docent program will make possible.

As for us in the first class, our training is not yet over. As soon as the building is completed and the exhibits inside, we shall have at least a semester's worth of in-gallery training, familiarizing ourselves with the exhibits and displays, and sharpening communication skills by role playing "docent and visitor."

MOST PROBABLY this year's group of docents will join with us for the in-gallery portion of the course. It's not too late to become part of this exciting enterprise. If you have a sense of curiosity, if you care about the world around you, if you like people, the docent-training program is for you.

The Gamesman

The Mystery Writers Win

By RICHARD C. MOON

Since the late 1930's Parker Brothers' "Clue" has been one of the most popular board games in this country. Clue addicts insist that this detective game is every bit as exciting and stimulating as reading a good mystery novel.

For decades the amateur sleuths have been testing their powers of deduction in trying to unravel the mystery, "Who Murdered Mr. Boddy?" Was it Col Mustard, in the lounge, with a revolver? Was it Miss Peacock, in the kitchen, with a rope? Or could it have been Miss Scarlet, in the conservatory, with a knife? Or did Professor Plum, Mr. Green or Mrs. White commit the crime?

THE GAME, designed for 3 to 6 people, aged 8 to adult, has gained the respect of the most discerning of game players and mystery buffs. In fact, earlier this year in New York, Clue proved to be a favorite with top mystery writers and real life detectives.

The event was a National Clue Championship in conjunction with the Second International Congress of Crime Writers and sponsored by the Mystery Writers of America. Some of the world's most famous mystery writers attended including Ellery Queen and Isaac Asimov, Brian Garfield ("Death Wish"), Lucy Freeman ("Stop Me Before I Kill More"), James Grady ("Six Days of the Condor"), and Richard Martin Stern ("Towering Inferno").

Well, much to the chagrin of New York's finest, the writers won every time in this tournament, thus lending even more credibility to their understanding of the criminal mind.

WHEN IT was all over the Title Clue Champion went to the author, Percy Spuriark Parker, (no relation to Parker Brothers). It was he whose deductive powers came up with the true culprit — Miss Scarlet, in the conservatory, with a candlestick.

The fact that so many who take their crimes and mysteries seriously lends further proof to the fact that Clue is a true classic. It is a game that will put your skill as a budding Sherlock Holmes to a severe test. At under $8 it is quite possibly one of the best buys in board games today.

Church Panel Speaker

The Social Action Committee of St. Martin's Episcopal Church invited a staff member of the Citizens Action League to speak at its recent meeting.

Representatives of two other Daly City churches were present: St. Jeanne Weis of St. Andrew's Catholic Church and the Rev. David Swope of Daly City United Methodist Church. The Citizens Action League, or CAL, is a grass roots organization which provides a way for average people to work together for the solution of community problems.

CAL is conducting an organizing campaign in Daly City neighborhoods to talk to people about issues that concern them and to plan action strategies. Further information may be obtained by calling any of the three churches or CAL, San Francisco headquarters, 543-4101.

THE DIET CORNER

By ELISE GENDAR

Rejoice in the harvest that is now upon the land. Especially all of you dieters out there. Never are fruits and vegetables better for you and more satisfying than when they are fresh, fresh as they are these days.

Nutrients are fragile things, and one of the most fragile of all is vitamin C, with which these fresh fruits and vegetables are loaded. And isn't it lovely to be lazy when you realize that all the potential vitamin C of the fresh produce is realized if you eat it raw? Or that using a vitamin C-drenched fruit or vegetable in cooking with skin intact not only preserves our time, it preserves the vitamin? I knew I was doing myself a favor all the time my friends said it was merely sloth!

Tell you another thing about vitamin C — it bruises easily. That's because it expires in the presence of oxygen. Cut into a stalk of broccoli and an enzyme that destroys the vitamin begins its insidious work. So you must be clever and quick and rush the cut broccoli to the pot within minutes or presto, you've lost what you bought in the way of nutrition. As for salads, toss them gently; serve them immediately.

Now that apple season approaches (oh, munching, crunching delight), knowing that the best container for the vitamin C with the apple remains in the apple's own skin, you need not regret Mom's apple pie. For those of you who may not eat raw fruits and vegetables, another helpful hint. If you boil the liquid in which you cook the apples for applesauce, say, for two minutes before adding the fruit, you drive out the evil air that depletes the vitamin. Do this with any vitamin C-important fruit or vegetable — and cover the pot as well. Every little microgram adds to your body's nutrition.

Of course, I would not leave you without a recipe. Today I am sharing one from Oklahoma, rich in vitamin C and vitamin A. Besides all of which it tastes good.

Members of the Beta Sigma Sorority opened the fall schedule of meetings with a gathering in the home of chapter president, Mrs. Dorothy Vanek, last week.

Mrs. Olive Rubek, the chairperson for publicity for the chapter, reports that plans for the international sorority's 50th anniversary celebration were discussed and work continued on the quilt being made by the members of the local chapter. Hopefully, the quilt will be completed prior to the chapter's fashion show which will be in April. (Mrs. Rubek indicated that members hope to have it completed so that it can be offered as one of the main prizes awarded at the fashion show.)

THE HOLY ANGELS Women's Guild will change the night of the regular monthly meetings, according to Mrs. Dianne Leonetti, publicity person for the guild. Beginning with this month the guild will meet the first Thursdays at 8 p.m. in the parish hall.

Mrs. Audrey Zanobini, president, announced the meeting change, introduced her executive board, the parish pastor, Father Edward Cleary, and the Holy Angels parish school principal, Sister Helen, during a coffee and get-together hosted by the guild for mothers of incoming students.

In keeping with the new meeting schedule, the September session was last Thursday evening. Plans for the coming season were discussed.

Serving with Mrs. Zanobini, Mrs. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Leonetti will be Mrs. Sandy Buglar, vice president; Mrs. Adeline Nagtalon, treasurer; Mrs. Pa Schmidt, recording secretary; and Mrs. Leslie LaCoco, corresponding secretary.

MEMBERS OF the Daly City Garden Club met last week to hear Forest Eby, Bill Braas, Fred Adams, Louis Filarski and Mrs. Trudy Wayne discuss ways and means of grooming plants for exhibits.

Big topic of conversation during the evening was the club's 23rd standard flower show which will be Sept. 16 in the Serramonte Shopping Center Mall.

"The Four Seasons" will be the show theme and all local amateur flower enthusiasts, over 18 years of age, are invited to take part. Registration forms will be sent to persons calling 467-4286.

THE NORTHERN California Chapter of the Victorian Society in America will meet in the Museum of Vintage Fashions in Dinkelspiel House Sept. 15.

Mrs. Leslie Gleason-Hawksbee, the chapter president, will discuss plans being formulated for a party being planned for visitors who will be here for the national Victorian Society gathering this coming week.

She Hates Hair Combing

By DR. BARNETT, D.V.M. QUESTION: "Spunky" hates to have us comb her — or even brush her with soft bristles. Believe me, she needs it because she gets hair-balls and tangles. Everytime she sees us coming with a brush or comb she hides. We could have her groomed by a professional but I think they would have the same problem. She also won't let us touch her feet and bites us if we do. What makes her so sensitive?

— B. J.

ANSWER: "Spunky" needs a tranquilizer so she can relax and enjoy a good brushing. Having her clipped completely (to about one-half inch length) would eliminate the tangling and matting problem you mentioned and the hair would grow back by winter-time. A short hair makes it easier to locate fleas or any areas of skin infection which are often hidden under the long matted hair.

QUESTION: A breeder is willing to give us a pedigreed German Shepherd that has a physical flaw — hip dysplasia. He says that we shouldn't try to breed her. What kind of problems would we have with this kind of dog?

— K. G.

ANSWER: Hip dysplasia is a term describing an inherited condition of improperly developed hip sockets. The head of the femur does not fit into the shallow hip sockets and the movement within the joint causes arthritis to develop. Usually hip dysplasia is found in the larger breeds, especially German Shepherds, but occasionally it is found even in smaller breeds.

Since the condition is hereditary, certainly the dogs that have it should not be bred. The only positive diagnosis of this condition is with an X-ray of the hips and this always should be done if you are contemplating breeding dogs and raising puppies.

ANSWER: Many dogs become very nervous due to firecrackers over the Fourth of July, etc. We usually recommend tranquilizing the dog during those days that are especially noisy. Your veterinarian can give you the proper dosage for your dog.

BRIGHT LIGHTS BY LLOYD JOHNSON

Fight Shown on King's Table TV

Sports fans: NORM LARSON will be showing the All-Spinks fight on the giant seven-foot TV screen this Friday at 5 p.m. in the friendly lounge of the KING'S TABLE in Redwood City. Arrive early and have a sumptuous buffet dinner. Then settle back and enjoy the fight. Big cocktails and mixed drinks are just $1. One of the first cash registers ever made by National Cash Register Company is among the many artifacts on display at SCOTTY CAMPBELL'S restaurant in Redwood City. Although the register is still in working condition, Owner JIM SNADECKI "rings up dinner sales" on a more modern type. BEARDSLEY'S restaurant-lounge offers dinner seven nights a week, lunch Mondays through Fridays. Great piano bar music for listening and sing-alongs, and the Upstairs Room may be reserved for special parties and banquets. Plenty of parking in the rear of the restaurant. It's been three months since SAM VIDUCICH took over ownership of the ATLANTIC SEAFOOD GROTTO in San Mateo. Although this is his first restaurant venture in the U.S.A., he is no stranger to the business. Sam owned a successful restaurant in Yugoslavia on the Adriatic Sea, his native country.

Mother and Son Team Restaurant Winner

Seems like only yesterday, but it was really many years ago that we first opened the door of ENRICO ROMANO'S Rockaway Beach restaurant, which was about the beginning of the pizza stampede. Enrico's mother, ENRICKETTA, who had an old family recipe for Italian sauce, could prepare the discs (to eat in or take out) just as fast as her young son could fire the oven. Through the years, this mother and son team established what is now known as ROMANO'S Italian and Seafood restaurant. Mother Romano, now enjoying her early 80's, still oversees the pizza production, as well as the dinner action. Enrico tends to the duties of host — and does it well. Looked as if PHIL LEHR'S Pay-By-Ounce STEAKERY, on the lower level of the San Francisco Hilton Tower, was the unofficial headquarters for the big Western National Restaurant Convention. Restaurateurs from all over the United States were making reservations for dinner parties. ROSEBUD'S ENGLISH PUB, the elegant $1 million restaurant in the heart of San Francisco's Geary Street "Theater Row," is a mini-museum filled with fascinating (and priceless) artifacts from around the world collected by co-owner BILL MONRO.

Owner Recommends Gong's Dinner

Unlike some Chinese restaurants, GONG'S, located in the Brentwood Shopping Center, South San Francisco, will serve their special dinners (usually for two or more persons) to single parties. Owner JOHN CHIANG especially recommends Gong's Dinner, which he has selected to appeal to the widest variety of tastes. There's dancing seven nights at BAYHILL LOUNGE. For those who can disco dance and want to be better, CHARLES and CONNIE LEE present disco lessons on Sunday nights. On Monday nights you can dance to "oldies but goodies" of the 50s and 60s from 8 to 10 p.m., followed by disco dancing till 12 midnight. Four dollars buys a Chicken Cacciatore dinner, served family-style, at YOLANDA'S this month. Each month Owner BOB McLANE and Chef Jim Castro select a different entree as a special, which is served with soup, salad or pasta, French bread and a glass of wine. And you're going to be impressed with the friendliness of this South San Francisco restaurant. TILLIE'S 'LIL' FRANKFURT in Moss Beach featured a special breakfast last Sunday from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m., with all proceeds to benefit the Coastside Lutheran Church. "All-you-can-eat pancakes served with sausages, and all the coffee you want was only $2.50. Children (12 years and under), $1.75.

Customers Entitled To Substitutions

To prove their flexibility, LA PINATA Mexican restaurant in downtown Burlingame feels their customers are entitled to make substitutions when ordering from the menu. And you'll find that a "no-no" in most restaurants. Also orders to take home. The opening of BAY MEADOWS race track last Monday brought thoughts of winners to mind. And to start things off this week we suggest the Veal Parmigiana as served at VINCE'S Italian and Seafood restaurant. In Rockaway Beach, Chicken Saute with Mushrooms is one of NICK'S selective menu treats. The prime rib feast at the swank MOONRAKER restaurant will make your mouth water. CAPTAIN CHARLES, the GUST family's latest restaurant success, offers the ultimate in seafood and shell fish, with our choice being Rex Sole Meuniere. Since his return from a vacation in England last month, Eddie Woodford, maitre d' at L'AUBERGE French restaurant, has really been a busy man. "Lunch business gets later and later," said Eddie. "Many times it lasts until 4 p.m." SUGAR N' SPICE, the award-winning disco dance team, congratulated DEAN LEHR on the new Cabaret Melon Cooler he originated and is featuring at LEHR'S CABARET DISCO, San Francisco. Made with Midori, the popular drink has the taste of fresh honeydew melon.

Lots of Toxic Chlorine Rolling Through

By JANET PARKER

Trucks laden with one and two-ton containers of liquid chlorine travel the freeways and some residential areas of San Mateo County every week destined for local sewage treatment plants.

Although many safeguards aimed at preventing disastrous leaks of the highly toxic gases are built into the transportation system, local plant authorities acknowledge that chlorine is not the safest treatment method available.

"It would be financially not too feasible to throw away thousands of dollars of equipment and put in another process," said David Gehre, general manager of the North County Sanitation District. The Daly City plant, serving 90,000 customers, was constructed only three years ago and designed to use chlorine purification.

"We feel as safe as we can be," said Gehre. He noted that there's nothing to prevent a vehicle carrying those chlorine-filled cylinders from being involved in a traffic accident.

However, the tanks are constructed with a double wall and chained to the truck transporting them, he said.

An investigation in San Francisco led to disclosure this week that chlorine was being transported to the city's sewage treatment plant in violation of certain laws and in the dead of night across San Francisco Bay.

The report prompted quick action from the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, concerned for the safety of the public should a chlorine gas leak of large magnitude occur.

Every sewage treatment plant in San Mateo County uses chlorine in its process and stores up to 15 tons of it on site at a time.

Only one facility, operated by the South Bay Sewage Systems Agency, is planning to convert to another method.

According to James Bewley, superintendent of the plants serving San Carlos, Redwood City and Belmont, a new plant expected to be completed in September 1980 will generate sodium hypochlorite.

Bewley said the substance is like a strong bleach and is much safer than chlorine.

"One of the main reasons for going to on-site generation of hypochlorite was the safety factor," Bewley said. One of the cities he serves, Redwood City, knows well what can happen when a chlorine leak occurs.

In July last year, 10 persons, including the plant operator, suffered chlorine gas inhalation when a gasket failed at the plant. Three were hospitalized overnight.

Bewley said the decision to switch to another safer method of purification had already been made by that time.

"It just points out the kind of thing that can happen with chlorine," Bewley said.

'Wonderful People' Speed Dorothy on Way

By GEORGE GOLDING

Dorothy is going home to Sri Lanka.

Salvation Army Lt. Mike Shepard stood on a street corner in downtown San Mateo for 34 hours Thursday and Friday to collect the money so she could.

"People were just wonderful," said Salvation Army representative Donna Heath.

"They just came up to him and donated money — women and men and little kids. They didn't even ask for a receipt."

Shepard started his round-the-clock street corner stand at Fourth Avenue and San Mateo Drive after all other methods had failed.

He said he felt that reviving the 100-year-old practice of "kettling" for the needy would do the trick.

Through Thursday, however, donations came in slowly.

Passersby did not know why the young man in the dark blue uniform was standing there with his "kettle."

Thursday night was windy, cold and lonely until around 10:30, when two families came to visit Shepard after reading in The Times what he was doing. They left more than $100.

By 9 a.m. Friday, the collection totaled over $200. By 11 a.m., it was over $400.

At 4 p.m. Friday, Shepard was — in his own words — "sitting on the corner bench where I slept last night, in hopes of composing that elusive thing known as thank you."

"Two days ago, I sat here for a moment wondering if a wild scheme would work. Could a bucket sitting here beside me receive $900 to send a desperate woman home to her family? Perhaps faith in God's goodness and in my fellow man told me yes."

Shepard pledged he would stand on the corner "until she goes home," and posted newspaper clippings to help tell his story.

"People have said, 'This is a fine thing you are doing,'" he said, "but I've done nothing. The people of San Mateo and this Peninsula have done it all."

Donna Heath said arrangements would be made, starting Monday, to send Dorothy home to her waiting husband and children.

The 36-year-old woman had left her family in Sri Lanka months ago to earn money for their support by working as a nursemaid.

Her employer left her here, without funds, and with a diplomatic passport that forbade her working to earn her own way home.

For more than two months, she was the guest of a San Mateo couple, Frank and Jamie Nichols. All the red tape had been

The hypochlorite system, he explained, will cost more initially but will cost about the same as chlorine in the long-run.

Hypochlorite is generated on site, using water, electricity and salt. That makes it an excellent product for the bayside plants, he added.

Menlo Park also will be served by the new plant.

The two plants together, he said, normally store up to 18 tons of chlorine. Deliveries occur twice a month.

The plants, he noted, are located in isolated industrial areas so the trucks delivering chlorine from a Union City company do not travel residential areas.

According to Gehre, trucks delivering about six tons of chlorine gas to the Daly City plant from Milpitas every month must drive through the Westlake Park area.

Trucks delivering chlorine to the San Francisco Water Department in Millbrae and the Pacifica sewage treatment plant on Beach Boulevard also travel through residential areas.

"Because of the position of the pump stations, we normally try to stay on the main highways," said water district assistant water quality engineer R.A. Hewett concerning transport from the Millbrae headquarters to the outlying areas.

"We try to stay off residential areas but we do have to go through some portions," he noted. However, he said that in the 20 years he has been with the company, there has been only one small leak due to a faulty valve.

"There are several other methods that can be used. However, cost enters into it," he added.

A popular method in England, he said, is ozone treatment, a method of sterilization. But, he said, after the ozone treatment has been performed, there's no protection of the water beyond that point.

Anyway, Hewett said, most of the chlorine problems he has witnessed have been due to human failings.

San Mateo's plant, according to maintenance supervisor Jim Ladd, uses about a ton of chlorine a day and keeps about 10 one-ton cylinders on hand. The substance is transported by truck from Santa Clara.

Millbrae City Engineer Lyle Johnson said the plant in that city, just under the Millbrae Avenue overpass at Bayshore Freeway, uses 5 one-ton containers a month.

South San Francisco's plant, according to superintendent John Collins, uses nine tons every two weeks.

Elton Mattson, motor carrier supervisor for the California Highway Patrol, noted that any trucks carrying chlorine must be clearly marked. They are not permitted on the San Francisco Bay Bridge but may cross others with a permit.

There also are no restrictions on travel through residential areas, he said.

"I have been here for 21 years and I know of no problem we have encountered in the nine Bay Area counties with transportation," he said.

"Someday they may come up with a better system," Hewett added. "But it's the best we have and the most efficient we have available to us."

Insta-Tune introduces the $13,164 tune-up for

$39
(or less)
most cars

It takes a lot of expensive equipment to tune a racing engine. About $13,164 worth, to be exact. Just imagine what that kind of equipment could do for a passenger car! One way to find out is to take your car to a nearby INSTA-TUNE center. At INSTA-TUNE, the nation's largest tune-up chain of its kind, every car is dynamometer tuned under actual driving conditions. So you get peak performance and maximum horsepower at all driving speeds. Sophisticated electronic equipment is used to analyze ignition, exhaust and carburetion so your car will deliver the best possible gas mileage. In fact your gas savings alone could more than cover the cost of an INSTA-TUNE tune-up. And, by the way, your INSTA-TUNE center will do a complete tune-up on most American or foreign cars in about 30 minutes, while you wait.

Here's what you get:

- New plugs, points and condenser
- New distributor cap, rotor and coil, if needed
- Replace faulty ignition wires and/or terminals
- Adjust points and timing
- Adjustment and chemical cleaning of carburetor
- Service PCV
- Dynamometer engine tune-up
- Infrared performance analysis and adjustment of hydro-carbon and carbon-monoxide exhaust emissions
- Service or replace air filter

Plus you get a 6-month/6,000 mile warranty covering all installed tune-up parts and labor, good at any INSTA-TUNE center nationwide.

"Nothing's new, and nothing's true, and nothing matters."

Wait! There's a new cookbook, "Niu Ideas" (U.S. Government Printing Office), with recipes "to serve volunteers through feast, famine, meat or none, from first pa'ango to the end of the month."

EACH of the recipes was prepared by the authors and personally tasted by "hard-core samplers" and other authors. Indeed it took all of 1976 for the tasters, meeting in weekly sessions, to select the recipes that should be included in the publication. But the testing didn't end there. The authors took the recipes home and tried them out on their husbands; they even sought the opinions of dishwashers.

So how about baked tomatoes with French dressing or grilled marinated peppers or fish and yam fritters? For a meal that glamorizes a lowly can of tuna, try Banana-Tuna Curry or Tuna and Bread Casserole, Tuna Sasage, Tuna Pizza, or Tuna and Macaroni a la Tonga with peppers and cheese and garlic powder.

For dessert make a Sweet Potato Pie or an Eggnog Cake or Plum Custard Shortbread — or better still, Passionfruit Marshmallow Whip. For your salad, try your hand at Banana Radish Dressing or Avocado Mayonnaise. Remember, each recipe has been husband-tested.

"Niu Ideas" is new. Get it from the U.S. Superintendent of Documents or borrow it from the public library.

THERE IS something else that's new. "Something From Nothing" (Chartwell Books, $3.98) is a craftbook prepared to reawaken in parents the fun of creating toys and amusements from throw-aways and to inspire them to lead their children to new worlds of craftsmanship and amusement.

"Something From Nothing" presents 101 ideas with pictures and instructions to assist in creating each one of them. So here you learn how to make a wicked witch puppet from cotton reels and how to build castles, houses, shops and stores from small boxes, paper and paint, and how to make piggy banks from papier-mache.

One of the most valuable uses of "Something From Nothing" tells how to turn scraps into Christmas decorations. Imagine a tree decorated with houses and Santas and birds created and colored by your own children. Imagine your table decorated with a toy house fashioned from graham crackers, frosting and candies.

ALSO FOUND among the things that are new is Leonard Biegel's "The Best Years Catalogue" (Putnam, $6.95). This is a source book for older Americans to assist them in solving problems and living fully. In it may be found timely discussions of nursing homes, condominiums and other residences. One chapter is devoted to the rights of seniors, another discusses money problems. Still another deals with joining organizations and with sharing one's talents and with volunteering.

"The Best Years Catalogue" is full of the addresses of sources of pamphlets and books that are free or of little cost. It is illustrated beautifully in black and white and tastefully printed so it is a pleasure to use. Its publisher calls it "a comprehensive handbook for living life over 50 happily, creatively, and economically, an indispensable guide to the fulfilling pleasures and creative possibilities of the golden years."

Its author, Len Biebel, is a communications consultant and an Emmy-winning television producer. His book is new and valuable.

(FIRST OF THREE PARTS)

If William Edward (Willie) Kamm of Burlingame weren't 78, he'd be categorized as an Angry Young Man. But Kamm, a hot corner fielding genius who spent 13 years in the big leagues in the 20s and 30s playing with and against seemingly half the Hall of Fame, is a typical baseball player, former or contemporary.

He doesn't like umpires or official scorers, sometimes couldn't get along with management, and like many old-timers, thinks that the Hall of Fame has been cheapened and that today's players are making playing the game appear to be a lot harder than it is.

IRONICALLY, Kamm, who Charlie Graham sold from the Seals to the White Sox in 1922 for an unprecedented $100,000 in cold cash, is a good-natured man who mixes a pixyish sense of humor with dry wit. He actually is a rather quiet, apparently stoic man, but when he talks, he has something definite to say, a quality which undoubtedly had something to do with his friendship with Ty Cobb, who accepted few friends.

One quality Willie never particularly liked about himself is his apparently inborn pessimism, which often made him appear to lack confidence, though it was really, he says, more shyness than anything.

When Willie was growing into baseball, rushing his paper route so that he could hustle to Golden Gate Park to cavort on its fabled Big Red diamonds, the biggest ambition of any kid in San Francisco from ages 10 to 16 was to play the Park Bums.

EVERY Saturday and Sunday these older players would choose sides, put up a dollar apiece, and play for the $1.90 winner's pool. Kamm was no different from the rest of the kids. Professional baseball, to him was a fantasy, the major leagues a dream.

"In fact," recalls Kamm with a smile, "my wildest ambition didn't go beyond playing for one of the two best kids' teams in the city — the L.B.'s or the Sunset Federals. If you could play with them, you thought you were a wizard. You got a uniform. That was the big thing."

Spike Hennessy, a legendary semi-pro figure in San Francisco who had once been a trainer with the Sacramento club in the Pacific Coast League, talked that club into signing the just-turned-18-year-old Kamm, but Willie was released in a month, after which Hennessy got him a job in the Oregon Shipyard League, working and playing ball on weekends. Willie came back when that season was over, played more semi-pro in San Francisco, and then was signed by Graham, the Seals' manager and part owner, in 1919.

GRAHAM told Kamm he was going to be the regular third baseman, but Willie asked to be farmed out, because he didn't think he was ready. Graham stuck with the kid.

When Willie was sold to the White Sox for that fabulous $100,000, after fielding spectacularly and hitting .340 in 1922, he found out about it from a Market Street newsboy yelling the headlines. Kamm, who had been left home from a road trip because of a pulled muscle, stopped in total shock to look at the newspaper, and when a couple of fans recognized him he panicked, gimping up Market Street at the highest speed he could muster, finally ducking into a movie house and sequestering himself there for hours until the furor had calmed.

And all the time he was sitting in that movie house, he was thinking to himself, "I'm no big league ball player." Kamm, in fact, seriously considered not reporting so as not to embarrass himself, but Graham talked him out of it.

KAMM never did embarrass himself. For years he was considered by many to be, defensively, the equal of Pittsburgh's eventual Hall of Fame third sacker, Pie Traynor, who had broken in three years before Kamm, and who is still considered by many baseball historians THE peerless third baseman.

Kamm had a lifetime batting average of .281, was usually among the league leaders in walks, struck out an average of only about 30 times a season, could steal a base when the club needed one, was known as a clutch hitter, and seldom missed a game.

For years he held the record for most consecutive games without an error for third basemen (75) until broken by Boston's Rico Petrocelli by two games in 1971. Willie still holds major league records for most consecutive times leading a league in fielding at third base (six) and for most consecutive chances accepted in a season without error, 242. He has the AL record for most put-outs in a season, 243. Not even Traynor holds that many records for third basemen.

With those kinds of stats, Kamm could be on a three-million dollar, five-year contract these days (his top salary was $13,000, but $1,000 of that was extra pay for being team captain), but he doesn't resent modern baseball's economic structure.

"MORE POWER to the players," says Kamm, who understood the bonus even in 1922, when he was given a 5 percent cut of his sale price to the White Sox.

Kamm is one of the few old-timers who feels that long term contracts aren't going to make any difference in a player's performance. "Whether they hustle or let down, it all depends on the temperament of the player. A guy like Pete Rose would hustle for pennies, and there's other big money players who will NEVER hustle."

About the only serious thing Kamm has against today's players is that they make the game look harder than it is.

"THERE'S only one thing I'd do over again if I had the chance," says perhaps the smoothest, most graceful of all third basemen. "I'd make everything look tough, like a lot of guys do nowadays. One of the marks of a truly great defensive player is that he rarely makes a spectacular play. How many times did you see Joe DiMaggio catching a ball backhanded, over his head, his cap flying off? He'd be there, waiting for it."

Roger Peckenpaugh, who has been maligned because he made those eight errors in a World Series, was one of the smartest, smoothest shortstops I ever saw. Another one, even though he never got past the Coast League, was Roy Nicely, who played for the Seals in the '40's. But he had a hard time hitting over .220. Of course, Charley Gehringer is my all-time all-star infielder. He made everything look so easy at second base. He had great baseball instinct; did little things that the public would never see.

"I'm gonna tell you, the two easiest chances on the infield are the long hop and the short pick-up hop. If you're moving properly, you can make most ground balls into either one of those. But if you don't play the ball, just sit there flat on your heels, letting the ball play you, you're going to get all the tough hops. If you make them, it looks like you made a tough play. If you don't, it gets scored a hit — too tough to handle."

"THERE'S some guys, like Billy North, you see them 'short-legging' flies so they can make a helluva one-handed catch. I guess if you make it, it's fine, but you don't always make those kind. Why take the added risk?"

Kamm blames much of today's sometimes erratic defense on the modern glove.

Playing the Historic Old Presidio Course

The hills of San Francisco have a significant history of their own. A fire signal on Telegraph Hill was given to announce the news back in Oct. 25, 1850, brought by the steamer Oregon, of the admission of California as the 31st state of the Union. Russian Hill, because of the early Russian sailors' graveyard on its summit, and Nob Hill, where pretentious homes of four of the builders of the Central Pacific Railroad were built.

Another group of hills are where Lt. Moraga led a Spanish expedition in 1776 and founded the Presidio. He built an officers club that year and today it stands as the oldest edifice in San Francisco.

TODAY, a part of that government property is leased jointly by the Presidio Army Golf Club for Army personnel and the Presidio Golf Club, which services the civilian membership of the establishment. The golf layout was built in 1908 on land that once served as a temporary living site for the homeless after the earthquake of 1906. I guess some of the campers thought it would make a nice golf course because only with substantial funding of private money was this dream realized. The original English style clubhouse, built on city property, still services the members in regal fashion.

This 6,384-yard course once held the San Francisco Open Golf tournament with players like Tony Penna, Harry Cooper, Lawson Little and the eventual winner, Johnny Revolta, in the field. I should know, as I was a caddy there, and held walking ropes during the tournament to hold back the very few spectators from getting in the way of the players' backswings.

The course is basically the same today, with the exception of some bunker and fairway changes when I packed a golf bag for the 75-cent caddy fee during the late 30's. Today there are no caddies, just hand and electric carts taking players along rolling hillside terrain; tightly hemmed in by innumerable conifer and eucalyptus trees.

Golf course explorer

By Hal Gevertz

THE PRESIDIO Golf Course has to be an engineering marvel, as practically every hill has a little up in it. Even when the fairway seems somewhat level, there always seems to be a slight rise to the green.

The 448-yard par four 3rd is long by Presidio's standards that average 300 to 370 yards. Only minor inaccuracies are allowed off this tee as stand-out trees on the left allow no room for straying. The approach effort has to find a small, flat green, perched on the crown of a hill, protected by large frontal bunkers.

Due to the hilly nature of the Presidio, the course plays longer than it really is. Wind is another constant hazard due to its high elevation and proximity to the ocean, especially on holes where trees are not sufficient to prevent golf balls from being tossed about.

SOME OF the short par fives could help in picking up lost strokes if one avoids the mature trees that side-hill fairways have a tendency of helping golf balls find. The par five 501-yard 9th has the largest compact maze of Eucalyptus trees this side of Australia. It comes with tree markers posted along its left route showing golfers where off-line balls disappear, sometimes forever.

The 384-yard par four 12th will torment many with its intolerable rough on the left and unstoppable downhill property on the right. This high-ground fairway travels to a large bunkerless sloping green that will require delicate workmanship.

Only true accuracy will mark the stamp of success on the par three 170-yard 4th. A tight uphill fairway with scrub brush and trees on the left and the back of the green will have to be avoided to find a small parcel of putting greenery on the crest of the hill.

A BEAUTIFUL sight to behold is the par three 16th while using an approach iron to find a circular green encompassed by seven effective bunkers, 137 yards from the tee. This is quite unusual because each of the other holes has no more than two sand traps. Many of them are oversized and are nestled effectively around the grass fringes of the greens.

But I can't say there was consistent turf grass on the fairways as their ancient watering system was not working properly. I hope it can be remedied soon as members now are forced to play winter-rule golf during the summer season.

The excellent shaped greens are very individual in design and nature. Some of the slower and undisturbed surfaces are not hard to read and putt. But others with sharp angled breaking exteriors will hardly contain a ball-marker from sliding, let alone a golf ball, and one will be content to leave those greens unscathed.

A LARGE accommodated putting green and driving range are at paging distance from the starter's headquarters because with the large Army and civilian membership there always will be a delay in playing this nostalgic and historic Presidio golf course.

Work finally is under way on the project to expand the Oyster Point Marina.

Dredging of the South San Francisco harbor began about a month ago in the area that will eventually house 300 new boat berths.

Along with dredging, the other major phase of the initial work to be done includes building a cement breakwater.

Groundbreaking ceremonies will be Saturday at the marina and will include speeches by local dignitaries.

General manager Swede Hansen said Oyster Point will be the finest marina in the area.

"There is nothing that will approximate it," he said. "There is nothing like it in the Bay Area."

Berth facilities for the boater will be doubled, Hansen said, and the most modern technology will be used in marina construction.

"The intent is to provide the boater with everything he needs," the harbor master said.

But the marina is not just for the boating enthusiast, Hansen noted.

More than half of the marina is set aside for park and open space.

Recreational facilities will include an expanded swimming area, bicycle trails, a fishing pier and picnic areas.

The intention, Hansen said, is not to charge fees for park use except for uses related to boating.

Hansen said he could not say what the expansion project will cost.

The state has loaned the San Mateo County Harbor Commission $6 million for marina improvements.

Private developers will be responsible for construction of two restaurants, a shopping arcade, coffee shop and chandlery.

No local taxes are part of the funding package, Hansen stressed. He said state money comes from a tax on gasoline for boats.

Construction should be completed in two to three years, he said, adding he began working on the development plans in 1973.

The second phase of the project will include building streets, putting in lights, adding more than 300 berths and making recreational improvements.

In the final phase, Hansen said, the existing breakwater and 287 berths will be rebuilt.

There will be "absolutely" no problem, Hansen said, with finding boat owners who will use the new berths.

"Berthing is very crucial," he said. "There just isn't any this side of the bay."

Last year he set up a waiting list and already has 210 names on it.

At the San Francisco Marina there is a waiting list with 2,000 names on it, he added.

Following is a summary of the Oyster Point Marina Development Plan:

Restaurant-commercial area — Two restaurant sites are proposed as well as a shopping area, which will be designed to protect visitors from the wind.

Half the shops will be located within 200 feet of the water and the other half will have a view of a plaza below and the boat berths.

Winning Streak Nearly Upset

The Rams' 12-game winning streak nearly came to a surprising end during last week's 3-Man Hunch Play-offs.

In meeting their toughest challenge yet, the Rams defeated a stubborn South City trio 24-4, 24-28 and 30-26. Once again, Terry Richards and Andrew Lockwood sparked the Rams attack with 32 and 18 points respectively. South City was led by the impressive outside shooting of John Olcoof who finished with 20 points for the night.

In a minor upset, the Wonders defeated the "High Post," 24-22, and 24-18 and thus earned the right to meet the Rams in the title game next week. Balanced scoring was the key to the Wonders victory as John Frankovich poured in 18 points and Pete Gordon followed closely behind with 16 points. Larry Chapman kept the "High Post" in the contest with his 18 point contribution.

NPL Coaches' Outlook

South San Francisco High has never gone three consecutive years without winning the North Peninsula League football championship.

So the Warriors, after watching Westmoor cop the title in 1976, and finishing second to Half Moon Bay and Terra Nova in '77, are due to get back on the championship track.

Most of the NPL coaches have tabbed South City as the team to beat this season. But SSF should receive stiff competition from Oceana and Terra Nova, among others.

Almost all of the coaches agree that the Warriors, Sharks and Tigers will compose the top three, though not necessarily in that order.

Scholarships to Two Nominated By Mateo Group

Two San Mateo County students have been named recipients of scholarships offered by the California Legal Secretaries, Inc. The San Mateo County Legal Secretaries Association entered the names of both Eunshin Lee of South San Francisco and Sarah Lai of Daly City in the statewide competition for the awards.

Miss Lee will receive $400 to continue her studies in the legal secretarial field at the College of San Mateo where she has been enrolled the past year. Miss Lai, a recent graduate of Serramonte High School, will receive $250 as a legal secretary major at Skyline College. Bernice Lawry is scholarship chairman for the San Mateo County Legal Secretaries Association.

Ryan Joins Movement

By SANDRA FLEISHMAN
(Special to The Times)

Rep. Leo Ryan, D-San Mateo, announced in Washington today that he has asked U.S. Attorney General Griffin Bell to recommend a commuted sentence for Patricia Hearst because "she has been punished enough."

Citing the unusual circumstances of her kidnapping, the lack of precedent for judging the case of a "victim who is subsequently pressured into joining her abductors in committing a subsequent crime" and the recent admission of guilt by kidnapers William and Emily Harris, Ryan said the sentence should be limited to time served.

He distributed a companion letter from the now-retired FBI agent who located Hearst, Charles W. Bates, urging Bell to recommend the same action to the president.

Ryan said he was also motivated by a concern for the 24-year-old Hearst's safety in the Santa Rita prison in Pleasanton, where she has served three months of a seven-year sentence for bank robbery. In a visit with her Sunday, Ryan said Miss Hearst was "frightened" by the discovery of a "dead and partially decomposed rat on her bunk" on the day the Harrises pleaded guilty.

"She is a constant and inviting target to others," said Ryan, more so than other prisoners because of her "visibility."

The newspaper heiress is a constituent of Ryan through her family's residence in Hillsborough. Her total time in prison includes 14 months before her unsuccessful appeal of the sentence to the Supreme Court. She is now eligible for parole in June, 1979.

Ryan said Miss Hearst first wrote him in June after hearing that he had visited the facility. He has since talked with friends, her parents, Bates and James Browning, former U.S. Attorney who prosecuted the case.

"I don't think further time served will rehabilitate her, make her a finer or nicer person," said Ryan. "She is a young person who sits in prison waiting to get out."

The congressman said he convinced Miss Hearst Sunday to file an application for commutation. In earlier conversations, he said she had not agreed to that, but he refused to say whether she favored a full pardon.

A national movement to pardon Miss Hearst began in San Mateo County and has resulted in hundreds of letters and a request from Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., to the president for such action.

Ryan said he was "sympathetic" to the San Mateo organization's efforts but preferred commutation. "A full pardon implies a judgment of guilt or innocence. There's no way we will ever reach the point where we can say she was wrongly charged or rightly charged," he said.

9 Seek Trustee Post

Nine persons have applied for a vacant seat on the Laguna Salada School District board.

Trustee Grady Hesters resigned last month because he said he did not have as much time to devote to the post. The remaining four trustees will make an appointment until a March election.

Persons who have applied are Nick Carpenter, John Straight, Patricia Molenaar, Judy Keil, Betty Wilson, William Castello, Fred Jones, Botya Miller and Judy Johnson.

Each candidate will be interviewed in public next Thursday evening by the board.

Trustees agreed Thursday night that each candidate will be asked questions for 20 minutes. The other candidates will not be present in the room.

Rather than making a decision at another meeting, the trustees said they preferred to decide Thursday who would replace Hesters.

Not Much Time to File Appeals

By RICK SULLIVAN

In this most critical year of property reassessment, San Mateo County taxpayers will have only two weeks, perhaps less, to determine if their assessments conform to requirements of Prop. 13 and, if not, whether an appeal should be filed.

Post-Jarvis reassessment notices are due to be mailed Sept. 15, only 14 days before the deadline for filing an appeal.

The assessment assigned to property this year will be the base for all reassessments in the future, under provisions of the Jarvis-Gann constitutional amendment.

San Mateo will be the last of the four major Bay Area counties to notify property owners of their new assessments. San Francisco mailed notices July 25-28; Alameda, Aug. 15; Santa Clara, Aug. 21; and Contra Costa, Sept. 5.

In those counties and others throughout the state property owners are filing appeals "like never before," according to Walter Semml, an official of the state Board of Equalization.

Prior to enactment of Prop. 13, reassessment notices were mailed in April. The law allowed some 2½ months — between July 2 and Sept. 15 — for an appeal to be filed.

The delay in this year's mailing can be laid directly to an attempt by the county Board of Supervisors to save the cost of mailing in combining the notices with the actual tax bills to be sent in October.

On Aug. 1 the supervisors, by a 4-0 vote (Supervisor Edward Bacciocco was absent), voted to consolidate the two mailings. The move was estimated to have saved some $20,000.

The consolidation, however, was made contingent on passage of state legislation authorizing an extension of the Sept. 30 deadline for assessment appeal.

Sen. Arlen Gregorio, D-San Mateo, agreed to carry the provision in a major Prop. 13 clean-up bill. But that legislation was defeated last week.

After learning the fate of the bill, District Attorney Keith Sorenson told the supervisors at their meeting on Tuesday, "I see no alternative than to get those notices out as soon as possible."

Unprepared for failure of the Gregorio bill, the assessor's office is now hurriedly printing the new assessments — calculated last Aug. 21 — on postcards and preparing them for mailing.

Based on the statewide trend and also on the post-Jarvis reassessment methods used by this county, it is likely that a significant number of property owners in this county will want to file an application with the Assessment Appeals Board.

Power-Loss Pilot Not Flying for Now

Capt. Al Fritz, pilot of the Pan Am 747 that suffered a power loss on takeoff from San Francisco International Airport July 26, has been "withheld from flying" until the company completes investigation of the incident.

Pan Am headquarters in New York said the action was effective the day following the incident, and that it was a "matter of routine."

The company said it has been determined that one engine failed during the takeoff and that pieces of metal in the tailpipe of the engine indicate there was a turbine failure.

There was no loss of power in a second engine, as had been reported by an airfield safety officer, company officials said.

They said the investigation followed the incident because "this was not a routine engine failure, nor were the procedures following it routine."

County Harbor District Board Candidates Protest Rejection of Ballot Statements

The ballot statements of two candidates for directorship of the San Mateo County Harbor District — both campaigning for dissolution of the taxing body — have been rejected on advice of the district's legal counsel James Dennis.

"This is clearly a case of the Harbor district attempting to muzzle candidates who are potential critics of the district," stated candidate A. C.

"Bud" Harrison, a former Burlingame city councilman.

"It's another example of the tactics that the district has been continually using to thwart public discussion of an issue that is of great interest to county taxpayers," added Frederick Thurber, the other candidate.

Both Harrison and Thurber were advised of the rejection last week in a letter signed by incumbent district director and secretary Jack Bishop.

Bishop said the statements did not include "qualifications" to serve as a district director and thus would not be printed at district expense.

Statements submitted by eight other candidates vying for two open seats in the November general election have been accepted.

Harrison and Thurber have filed a lawsuit to force overturn of the rejection. Superior Court Judge

Walter Capaccioli has ordered district officials to appear in court Sept. 11 to explain why the statements were not accepted.

The statements of the two candidates do not detail vocational or avocational backgrounds. Instead they argue for dissolving the district and bringing it under the umbrella of county government.

Both men stated at a press conference Tuesday that their stand on the future of the district is in fact a statement of their qualifications to serve on the district board.

But in a memorandum to Bishop, Dennis concluded, "The statements submitted make no reference to the education of the respective candidates. There are no references concerning the background, business or governmental expertise or qualifications. The statements are not campaign statements, within the meaning of the elections code, but would be properly classified as other material."

Dennis noted that the harbor district policy expressly provides that the district will not permit candidates to prepare separately other campaign material to be sent to voters in voter pamphlets.

Harrison and Thurber said they would attend tonight's meeting of the district board to demand their statements be reinstated.

"The Board of Harbor Commissioners has the power to overrule the unilateral action of its secretary," said Harrison. "I can't believe that other commissioners will want to deny us the right to state our position."

"I think the harbor district is afraid of an open discussion of its future and what savings could be ensured by a reorganization of the district," added Thurber, who works as a county weights and measures inspector.

Harrison has been an outspoken critic of the harbor district for several years. As a member of the county Local Agency Formation Commission, he voted to dissolve the district two years ago.

Superior Court Judge Melvin Cohn, however, overturned the action. Cohn ruled that Harrison's vote as a LAFCO member conflicted with his position as a Burlingame city councilman.

Burlingame was one of 11 cities to ask LAFCO to dissolve the special district, asserting it served only special interest groups.

Millbrae Manager Leaving

Leland J. Horner, city administrator of Millbrae for the past five years, last week announced at a press conference in Livermore that he soon will be that city's new city manager.

Horner, 45, is not expected to assume his duties for about a month.

Horner will replace former Livermore City Manager Bill Parness, who resigned several months ago to take a new post after 21 years as manager.

In Livermore, Horner's salary will be about $50,000 a year, including fringe benefits. His current Millbrae salary is $37,440 a year, not including fringes.

Horner, a native of Southern California and a graduate of San Jose State University, first became Millbrae city administrator on Nov. 5, 1973. He had been assistant city manager in Ventura for the previous four years.

According to Millbrae Assistant City Administrator Bill Huston, Horner's decision came suddenly. "He just decided Wednesday night to accept the post," Huston said.

When Horner first came to Millbrae, he replaced Richard Watson, who was named to a position with the state Association of County Supervisors.

Livermore, in Alameda County, has a population of about 50,000. Millbrae's population is about 24,000.

Muscular Dystrophy Drive

Visitors and shoppers at Tanforan Park Shopping Center in San Bruno donated $20,200 to muscular dystrophy during the three-day Labor Day weekend telethon drive, Don Frate, Tanforan general manager, said Wednesday.

Frate said that topped last year's fund-raising effort of $18,500 and is the highest known amount to be raised at Tanforan since the Muscular Dystrophy Association began its association with the local shopping center.

The general manager also said that telephone banks at the mall, which served all of San Mateo County, raised an additional $106,000 to be donated to muscular dystrophy.

Prop 13 Threatens Animal Control

By LIN DAY

The Peninsula Humane Society today announced that as of Feb. 28, 1979, it will cease all animal control services.

That means, said Executive Director Richard Ward, that the society will no longer pick up sick, injured or dead animals, or strays. It will not quarantine or rescue animals.

"It will mean reverting back to what most humane societies do," Ward explained, "sheltering animals, providing adoption, and wild-life rehabilitation."

It will also mean that the society, from its shelter at Coyote Point, will enhance its educational programs and its work for public awareness of animal needs, he said.

Ward explained that passage of Proposition 13, and the reduction of the county budget for animal control as a result from $1 million last year to $570,000 this year, brought layoffs of several animal control officers.

The abandonment of all animal control, he said, will mean that about 20 more people will be lopped off the staff of 45 — these being the 12 animal control officers and the backup staff working with them.

Ward admitted that the society's decision could place the county in a difficult position in animal control. It will be necessary to have some sort of animal control, he said, and he hoped that it could be done without loss of the high standards he said the society demands.

Ward also felt that in the end it is going to be more expensive to the taxpayers if the county goes it alone.

But he said that this is not the society's problem. The society has been heavily criticized since the county budget cutback took place, Ward said, and some members have dropped out.

"We have had an unbelievable amount of criticism from city officials, law enforcement officials," he said.

Letters to the society, letters to the editors in local newspapers and news articles, have made it apparent, he said, that the general public, city and county officials and local law enforcement personnel are "not clear as to why animal control services were cut back, and by whom."

It was not, he said, the Peninsula Humane Society's choice to reduce animal control services. The reductions, he said, were at the "direction of the San Mateo County Board of Supervisors."

And the society does not contract with individual cities for animal control services, he said. It is the county that makes the contractual agreements with the 19 cities in the county.

During the past year, he said, the society did not enter into a contract with the county, but instead provided animal control on a month-to-month basis.

The recent cutback, he explained, reduced the services to an all-time low.

"It was a shock to the society and to most residents of the county that funding for animal control was so drastically cut," he commented.

Ward said a survey of other Bay Area counties and Northern California indicated that most programs were not cut at all and funding cuts amounted to only 10 to 20 per cent.

"By comparison, funding of animal control in San Mateo County was reduced 44 per cent," Ward said. And he added that a voter poll in the Sacramento area before the June election showed that animal control, next to police and fire protection, was considered the most vital service.

Ward left the door open for the county to change its mind. The county has not replied to his notification of the impending cessation of animal control services since it was announced a week and a half ago.

If the county decides to return to last year's full budget, or an amount of up to 10 per cent below that, the society's full animal control services, which have been provided since 1952, will continue, he said.

He noted that the city of Palo Alto had been preparing to turn over all animal control functions within the city to the County of Santa Clara but that community support indicated that this service was so vital that on Aug. 29, the city decided to defer such action until next year.

"Unfortunately," Ward said, "no community input or voter survey was taken in San Mateo County prior to the decision to reduce animal control funding."

The society "in no way" profits from participation in an animal control program, Ward said. "On the contrary, San Mateo County has had an exceptional bargain in contracting with our society for excellent animal control services."

Ward made it clear that the society is willing to offer its counsel, advice and concern to the county in meeting the problem.

Financing Plan May Save PHS

City and county officials will meet in two weeks to negotiate a financing plan to assure that the Peninsula Humane Society will continue year-around animal control services.

A special meeting was arranged following announcement by the humane society Thursday that after Feb. 28, 1979 it would no longer pickup stray, injured or dead animals nor quarantine them at its San Mateo compound.

Such a move would, by law, force the county and its 19 cities to assume the responsibility for animal control.

Humane Society Director Richard Ward announced that the service cutback is solely the result of a post-Proposition 13 budget reduction ordered by the county Board of Supervisors.

The supervisors in July chopped its humane society subsidy by nearly a half-million dollars — from $1 million last year to $570,000 this year.

The cutback, however, was made in the hope that cities would contribute some funds for a service that benefits them the most.

For the past several years, the county has shouldered the total cost of animal control. The county has contracted with the humane society to control animals in the cities and in unincorporated areas.

Cost of the service has escalated so much in recent years that supervisors decided they could no longer bear the entire financial burden.

Ward stated during the July budget hearings that San Mateo was one of the only counties in the state in which cities do not contribute to an organization responsible for animal control.

Supervisor John Ward (no relation) said Friday the board "strongly feels" that there should be a 50-50 sharing of animal control costs between cities and the county.

He said he believed the announcement by the humane society director would speed up cost sharing negotiations.

The City Managers Association, Ward said, already has appointed a special task force to work out a financing plan.

Richard Ward said Thursday that if extra funds are not forthcoming by February, the humane society would lay off 20 employees, including 12 animal control officers and their backup crew.

Anti-Crime Program Funds OK'd

A "Seniors Against Crime" program will be implemented in San Mateo County Monday through a $188,906 grant to the county's Citizen's Crime Prevention, Inc. (CAPREVE).

The grant from the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration will allow the local agency to employ two new staff members, Rose Sterling of San Mateo and Leon Dinkin of Belmont.

They will assist senior citizens with home-security inspection kits and questionnaires and in obtaining volunteers for the program.

Seniors Against Crime will train senior volunteers in Daly City, East Palo Alto, Redwood City and San Mateo — the target areas of the county — in crime prevention techniques.
